

Questions to Ask

Any member of Mensa is smart enough to be skeptical of that which you only see one side. As you should be. So here are a few simple questions you can ask your Chairman, and your RVC, and any other members of AMC, that should sufficiently satisfy your skepticism:

1. Are you well informed that American Mensa due process is extensively corrupt? If yes, what have you done about it?
2. Have you ever signed any Mensa document that could be construed as a loyalty oath?
3. Where can I find a detailed, itemized accounting of our $2,000,000 that was spent on the ADmensa lawsuit?
4. Who, specifically, recommended that lawsuit.
5. Where can I find a detailed, itemized accounting of all donations to MERF/Mensa Foundation, as well as all payouts?

Those are just a few simple questions you can easily ask them right here at the Annual Gathering. That is if you can find them. Though that might be a bit difficult, as they tend to keep to themselves, hiding in their hotel suites, that you, the members, pay for. While feasting from their fancy buffets, that you, the members, pay for. And drinking from their open bars, that you, the members, pay for. Indeed, your Executive Director, Pam Donahoo, makes sure the leaders of Mensa are well taken care of, wined and dined in style. After all, they are entitled to the perks, the plane tickets, the hotel rooms, the 5-star dining, as they are all volunteers, with much important business to do. All on your behalf, of course.
